The pursuit of the expressed objectives requires the involvement of all the Members and staff: this is achieved with the continuous information and training of each, according to their own job and competence.

The production methods, the technologies adopted, the responsibilities, the authority and the mutual relations of the personnel have been defined and organized so as to constitute a solid and well-branched base, flexible enough to immediately accept the innovations coming from outside in a optics of continuous improvement of the system.

I am aware that the achievement of this goal is only possible with the utmost commitment of each of us.
